An Evening Echo.

Mirth is like a flash of lightning, that breaks through a gloom of clouds, and glitters for a moment; cheerfulness keeps up a kind of daylight in the mind, and fills it with steady and perpetual serenity.—ADAMSON.

About the oil prohibitionist A. J. Findley as chairman of the Citizens' League, recognizes is James W. Robinson, judging from the fact that Mr. Robinson pledged himself in the last campaign to support the prohibition amendment and the further fact that Mr. Findley limited his appointments of election officers to Robinson and Democrats.

Findley and His Trust.

A. Judson Findley addressed the city council as follows last night in a written communication:

"As chairman of the executive committee of the Citizens' League of the city of Clarksburg, West Virginia, I respectfully request the appointment of the following named persons to serve as challengers and commissioners in the wards," etc.

Mr. Findley then proceeds to name all Democrats for the places. The letter to the council indicates that Mr. Findley assumed full responsibility in selecting the officers and did not consult the party or its committeemen.

The question naturally arises among many of the league why Mr. Findley appears to be attempting to turn the league over to the Democratic party. There is a strong suspicion that he has betrayed the trust reposed in him by the league.

Cause for Thankfulness.

An honest Democratic exchange has the following editorial paragraph in its latest issue, which the people generally heartily endorse, except the class mentioned therein as sought to be served by the last Democratic governor of West Virginia:

"The people of the state should be thankful that the tax laws were not monkeyed with nor the tax commissioner's office abolished. The MacCorkle bill would have been a disaster to the plain people, however acceptable it would have been to the corporations."

While the paragraph is short, it refers to Senator MacCorkle plainly enough to arraign him as a tool of corporate interests, and the recent record of MacCorkle substantiates the arraignment.

As the exchange says, the people truly have cause to be thankful that MacCorkle failed to get his scheme through.

Likely to Be Fruitless.

It should not escape the reading public that Governor Glasscock stands for a number of progressive measures the legislature recently failed to enact into law. It is worthy of note also that not only many Republican newspapers know that he is earnestly advocating these progressive measures but also a number of Democratic newspapers have implicit faith in his earnestness of purpose and are upholding him in the insistence that some of these measures at least shall become law. However, it is more than barely possible that there will have to be a campaign of education and strong pressure brought to bear before the present legislature would consent to the enactment of these measures.

It might be possible to get some of the bills through, if the governor should limit the number, but the Telegram doubts it. While the reasons in the following by the Shepherdstown Register would hold good under ordinary circumstances, there is scarcely a hope that the attitude of the present legislature could be changed on several of the subjects mentioned, to which the dominant influences in the party in this state now are hostile:

It is said that Governor Glasscock will call an extra session of the West Virginia legislature to meet in May, for the purpose of considering a primary election bill and several other important measures. We heartily approve of an extra session for the consideration of bills of general benefit, for such get little attention at the regular sessions, where they are crowded out by local measures and private and political schemes. By all means let us have an extra session.

Combine's Jumping Jack.

Senator McIntire of the eastern part of the state was a "leader" who did the combine's bidding at Charleston during the recent session of the legislature. He was regarded by the interests as the strong man of the Democratic end of that body and some newspapers entertain the delusion that he is really a great man. Perhaps he is, but one of his home newspapers has quite a different estimate of him as the following in the Shepherdstown Register edited and published by Harry L. Snyder, a staunch Democrat, shows:

The Martinsburg World says that Senator McIntire was one of the most conspicuous figures in the legislature, actively engaged in every matter.

This is quite true. The astute crowd of political tricksters from Kanawha county who controlled a considerable number of state senators found in Senator McIntire a perfect subject. Whenever they pulled the strings he went through the motions. He made the noise that drowned the creaking of the machine—he raised the fog that concealed the real manipulators of the Senate. The schemes were formulated by the past masters in Charleston who wanted results without personal notoriety, and Mr. McIntire was the lay figure that appeared in the public eye. From the time he struck Charleston and gave out that famous interview stating that his constituents were for Watson and Chilton, until he made the last bluff in the closing hours of the Senate, he was a man who moved as his real masters at the state capital directed—not as the people of his district desired.

Oh, yes! Mr. McIntire was, so thoroughly conspicuous that irresistibly we are reminded of the brilliant poem of Tom Pence, the genius of the Tar Heel state:

"De bigger dat you see de smoke,
De less de fire will be;
An' de leasest kind of 'possum
Klimbs de biggest, kind of tree."

Corn Questions.

In the third number of "School Agriculture," which deals with corn, "the American cereal," Prof. D. W. Working asks some curious questions about the word corn as it is used in the Bible. The lesson entitled "What Corn Is" begins with a quotation from Genesis—"And Joseph gathered corn as the sand of the sea, until he left off numbering." Then the corn lesson goes on:

"Many readers of the Bible have been puzzled by the use of the word corn. In the familiar story of Joseph, corn is frequently mentioned. The forty-second chapter of Genesis begins by reciting that 'when Jacob saw that there was corn in Egypt,' he proposed to his sons that they go down to the land of the Pharaohs to buy food for themselves and their little ones and their cattle. Was this corn of the Egyptians the same as ours?"

When Ruth, the Moabitess went to Bethlehem with her widowed mother-in-law in the beginning of the barley harvest, she asked permission to 'glean ears of corn' in the fields of Boaz. Was our Indian corn common in the fields of Palestine in those days? or, was the young woman asking for the privilege of picking what we call roasting ears? And when Sampson burned the 'standing corn' of the Philistines by setting fire to the tails of three hundred foxes and turning them loose in the field, was it the American cereal that he destroyed?"

To all these questions Prof. Working gives answers with an emphatic no. In the Bible "corn" means grain. Curiously enough, the worn corn seems to be used in many countries for the principal cereal grain. According to the old arithmetic, three barley corns make an inch. The Testament speaks of a 'corn of wheat,' clearly meaning a grain or kernel of wheat.

The Telegram's teacher readers will be interested in pursuing this subject further. They can do so by writing to D. W. Working, Morgantown, for "School Agriculture," which is sent free to teachers.
